

Information for Submitting Articles to Law Reviews & Journals

January 2019

The following are two charts useful for the law review/journal article submission process. The first chart contains information gathered from the journals' websites about the following topics:

- Methods for submitting an article (such as by e-mail, ExpressO, Scholastica, or regular mail);
- Any special formatting requirements;
- How to request an expedited review; and
- How to withdraw an article after it has been accepted for publication elsewhere.

The second chart contains information about rankings of the journals and the law schools associated with them. The first three columns are the overall ranking, academic/peer assessment score, and lawyer/judge assessment score for each school from the most recent U.S. News & World Report rankings. The other three columns are data about each journal from Washington & Lee's law review ranking website. The "citation ranking" is the total number of citations to the journal over the past eight years. The "impact factor" is the number of citations per article per year. The "combined rating" is a weighted combination of the citations and impact factor data. You can find more detailed information on the Washington & Lee website at <https://managementtools4.wlu.edu/LawJournals/>.

We hope this information is helpful. We provide it with several important caveats:

- First, the charts cover only "general" law reviews, not specialized journals. There are excellent specialized journals on many topics. Anyone submitting an article to law reviews will want to consider the specialized journals relevant to their article and particular area of expertise.
- The charts cover 203 schools and their journals. We have tried to be comprehensive; any omissions are inadvertent, and we'd be happy to hear what we missed so that we can add them.
- We do not mean to imply anything about how much importance, if any, should be given to numerical rankings of law schools or law journals. These sorts of rankings are certainly an incomplete, if not badly flawed, way of evaluating schools and journals. We provide the ranking information because it is something that many people consider to some extent in the submission process. Obviously each author can decide what to make of it.
- The chart is based on the information provided on each journal's website. Some journals may have alternative methods of submission (such as ExpressO or Scholastica) that are not mentioned on their website and therefore not included here.

For a helpful and more detailed discussion of the submission process and related issues for law professors, see Nancy Levit, Scholarship Advice for New Law Professors in the Electronic Age, 16 Widener L.J. 947 (2007), at http://papers.ssrn.com/sol3/papers.cfm?abstract_id=939007.

Good luck with your submissions.

Georgia State University Law Review	Prefers submissions via Scholastica. May also submit by e-mail to submissions.gsu@gmail.com	Include an abstract with manuscript. Because this journal publishes electronically, page limits are not as relevant as they are in the world of print publications. The journal is happy to let authors take advantage of this greater “bandwidth” to include material they might otherwise have to cut to get into a print journal. But authors should exercise some discretion with respect to length. A detailed set of formatting and other guidelines for submissions is at https://readingroom.law.gsu.edu/gsulr/policies.html	Scholastica. Gonzaga Law Review	Accepts submissions by Scholastica or by e-mail to gulr@gonzaga.edu	Accepts submissions on a rolling basis and encourages authors to submit work whenever they believe it is suitable for publication. Encourages authors to submit pieces to Gonzaga Law Review exclusively for two weeks. During the summer, suggests authors not submit to other journals until August 24. Authors submitting on an exclusive basis should indicate in their submission e-mail the date on which the piece will be sent to other journals. Prefers Microsoft Word. Double-spaced. Encourages gender-neutral language when possible. Bluebook citation format. Strongly encourages submissions of less than 25,000 words. Include a short abstract detailing how the argument fits into the current literature and how the argument differs from those of other authors. To enable anonymous review, remove all identifying information (name, affiliation, and acknowledgements) from the manuscript, file name, headers, and footers. Make sure the title is on the first page.	gulr@gonzaga.edu If you have another offer for publication, please request expedited review via the header in your e-mail submission. Expedited review provides no competitive advantage in the process. Any request for expedited review for less than three weeks from Gonzaga’s initial receipt of the piece may be disadvantaged.	gulr@gonzaga.edu The review process is time-consuming and extensive, so please let them know as soon as possible if you decide to withdraw your submission.
